

2024 - 2025 School Year Annual Report

Our Mission

Asian Hope exists to reach Cambodia for Christ by meeting the needs of vulnerable children and their families.

We do this by providing for today's needs with clean water & nutritious food. We can help change their tomorrow by giving them a Christian education that will prepare them for a career, thus ensuring we break the cycle of poverty.

Lastly, by sharing the good news of Jesus Christ and demonstrating Christian love and compassion, we are changing these lives for eternity.

A NOTE FROM OUR PRESIDENT AND CEO

When I was first introduced to Asian Hope, my goal was to join God in His invitation and be part of the incredible work He was already doing in Cambodia. I knew that Asian Hope was special and that this was a unique moment in the country's history. The political and spiritual climate created the perfect conditions to make a lasting impact and win a country for Christ.

Today, Asian Hope has grown to nine schools across Cambodia, employing nearly 400 staff and educating over 3,500 students and families every day. Our impact is felt throughout the country, as we have set the standard for accredited schools in Cambodia. Within the community, Asian Hope is widely recognized for its commitment to the Gospel and transformative impact on students' lives.

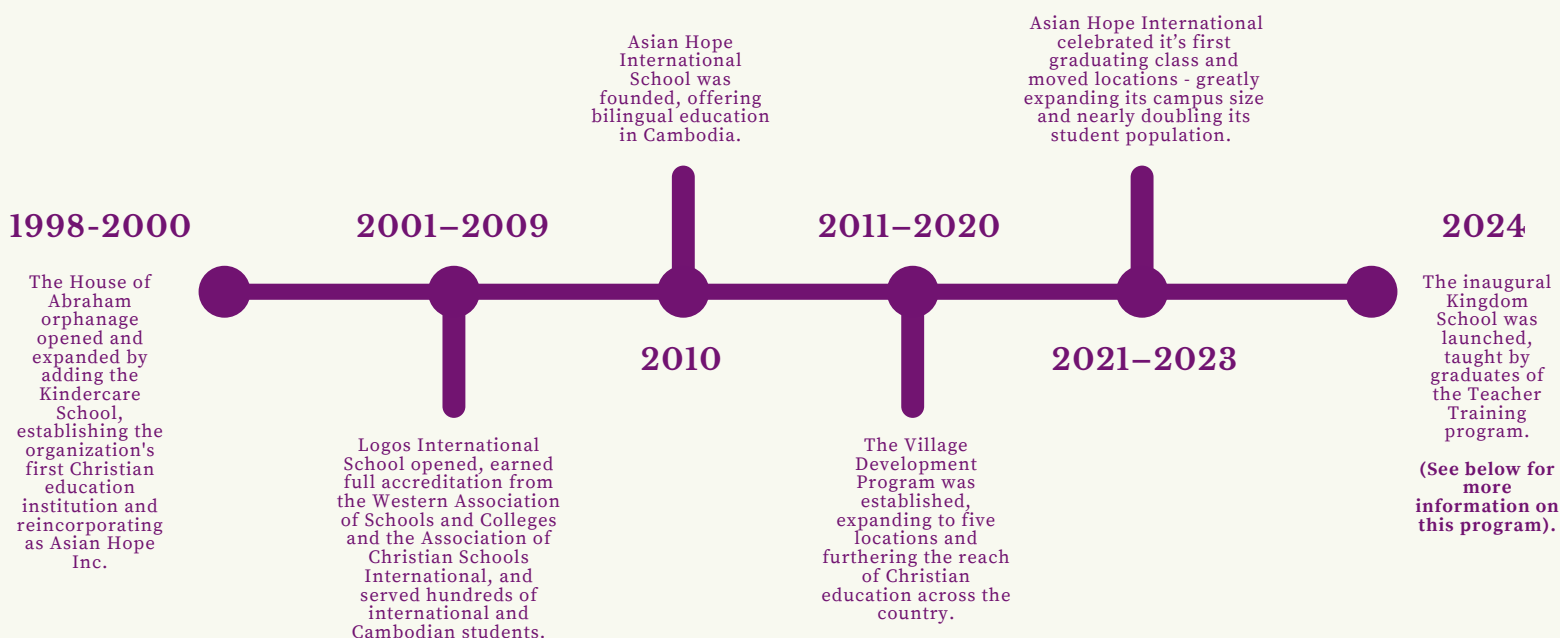

The Asian Hope Community looks forward to continuing to scale in order to make disciples by utilizing the highest quality education that exists in Cambodia. This year, we are eagerly anticipating the completion of our expansion at Asian Hope International School, which will allow us to double our enrollment and reach even more students in Phnom Penh. Additionally, we are excited to continue our growth in Battambang at Kingdom School while also setting our sights on establishing a second location.

We are deeply grateful for your continued support and prayers as we move forward in faith, trusting that God will use Asian Hope to transform even more lives for His glory.

A HISTORY OF OUR SCHOOLS

With a history of serving Cambodia for over 25 years, Asian Hope has grown and developed to meet the emerging educational needs of this beautiful country. As an organization we are honored to grow alongside communities we serve and bring the hope of the Gospel with each opportunity we provide.

We broke ground and opened on our first-ever Kingdom School, bringing quality, tuition-based education and scholarships to even more regions of Cambodia. These schools provide not only access to the Gospel of Jesus Christ but also a safe haven where children can gain the tools they need to build a brighter future.

Through this school model, Asian Hope partners with local churches to identify future educators, inviting them into a Teacher Training Program that creates jobs and strengthens communities. International donors provide the start up costs that open the doors to the school and the model of the tuition based and scholarship schools in the Asian Hope School system sustain the ongoing operations. This new school model accelerates our mission of expanding Christian education to all 25 provinces of Cambodia.

*An Educator's ViewpointLIFELONG OPPORTUNITIES, ETERNAL TRANSFORMATION

Cody Rogers, Director of Kingdom Schools & Director of Operations for International Schools, understands that a classroom is more than just a place for learning—it's a launching pad for lifelong transformation.

With an MBA and over a decade in international education, Cody's career path initially seemed worlds apart from his business background. However, his journey came full circle when he found the perfect intersection of business and education. While visiting Cambodia as tourists, he and his wife were profoundly moved by the country and felt a deep calling to serve there. Inspired by the idea of starting a Christian school, Cody developed a business plan—only to discover that Asian Hope had already established a model he deeply admired. Drawn to their mission, he joined as an English teacher, but over time, his business expertise became instrumental in expanding educational initiatives, including the development of Kingdom Schools.

From the beginning, Cody recognized Asian Hope's unique approach—using education to share the gospel while serving children across diverse socioeconomic backgrounds. He envisions the long-term impact of Christian education stretching far beyond the classroom, shaping future leaders across the globe.

"Teachers spend eight hours a day with students," Cody explains, emphasizing how education shapes a child's worldview—often for life. Many students in international schools make the decision to follow Jesus, and in turn, they become missionaries to their own families both from Cambodia and abroad. Some of these families hold positions of influence in nations that have been historically closed to Christianity. Cody imagines the ripple effect: as these young leaders step into influential roles, their openness to faith could become the catalyst for change in their home countries. Even for those who don't immediately embrace Christianity, their exposure to the Gospel through education can soften their hearts and open doors for faith in the future.

The impact of education in Cambodia itself cannot be underestimated. Access to learning transforms entire communities, turning them into centers of knowledge and hope. Even in areas once resistant to Christian influence, people have come to appreciate the tangible good that Asian Hope brings—changing not just individual lives, but entire societies.

Asian Hope's mission is clear: to reach Cambodia for Christ. Our strategy? Presenting the Gospel through Christian education to children at every socioeconomic level—changing lives and transforming the country for generations to come.

A 2024-2025 Highlight

KINGDOM SCHOOLS: A FULL COMMUNITY IMPACT

Asian Hope's mission is not just about bringing Christian education to the children of Cambodia—it's about transforming entire communities by sharing the hope of the Gospel. Through schools that uplift neighborhoods, jobs that sustain families, and opportunities for children to learn about Jesus, the impact of Asian Hope extends far beyond the classroom. This is especially true of the life changing Teacher Training Program, a key part of the newly launched Kingdom School Model.

Take the story of Kanha, for example. Kanha serves as a second-grade teacher at Kingdom School, and her journey is a testament to God's faithfulness. When asked what this ministry has meant to her, she shared:

"I am thankful to God that I learned of Kingdom School and that they accepted me to serve as a teacher. I have been a Christian for several years, but my husband did not agree to follow Jesus with me...At the lowest point in my life, Kingdom School became a lifeline to me as a single mom with two children."

Kingdom School provided Kanha with more than just a job—it provided a support system. She expressed deep gratitude for those who stood by her, saying:

"(Asian Hope) agreed to sponsor the cost of childcare, which helped me get through the teacher training. The daily devotions with staff have also strengthened my walk with God. My co-workers have become close friends, and it is like I have new brothers and sisters in my life."

As Kanha faithfully followed God's calling, she witnessed an incredible transformation in her own family. Her husband, once opposed to her faith, began to see the changes in her life.

"My husband called me one day to tell me that he now believes in Jesus too! God answered my prayers! This gave me hope that God could restore our marriage and provide a good home for our two daughters."

Today, Kanha and her husband are reunited, growing in faith together, and striving to raise their children in a Christ-centered home. She continues to teach at Kingdom School, sharing the love of Jesus with her students and their families.

"I love teaching children, and I want to share Jesus with the families of my students. There is much more that I could say about God's blessings to me! I wish to thank Asian Hope and the people that send missionaries to Cambodia. God used you to help change my life!"

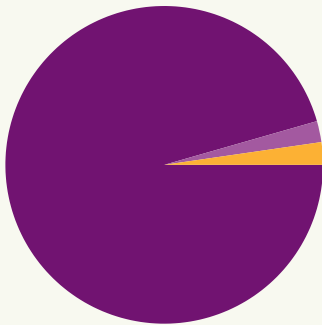

Kanha's story is just one example of the life-changing work being done through Asian Hope. Through education, discipleship, and unwavering faith, communities in Cambodia are being transformed, one life at a time.
